The responsibility of social institutions in building the values of citizenship to their children and raising them

Introduction :

The researcher begins his paper from the concept that the social institutions held the responsibility of qualifying the upcoming generations in all its names. To avoid the generations the miseries of violence and conflicts It is necessary to make acquire the skills of living together peacefully and accepting the others and respecting him as a human being, regardless , of his religion or color, language, sex,…etc .

The researcher here will focus on two things: the construction of the values of citizenship, and education on the values of citizenship. In fact, the citizenship contributes in the formation of good human whom the community hopes to bring it into existence ,adding a short definition for citizenship.

First: definition of citizenship:

(Global Arabic encyclopedia, 1996 p 311) defines citizenship as the term that refers to belonging to a nation or country .It is defined as: the relationship between the individual and the state, as determined by the law of that State , including the reciprocal relationship from the duties and rights l - in that state. The relationship shows implication of freedom and the responsibilities that accompanies it. (Alkuwari, 2001, p 66).

Accordingly, citizenship is the prestige enjoyed by someone as a complete member in a particular community. This total membership refers to reciprocal obligations on the part of individuals and the state.

The individual has the rights guaranteed by the constitution and laws emanating from it as a result of belonging to this community. And at the same the time, he has to perform the duties obliged by the constitution and laws emanating from it.

Building citizenship values:

It is recognized that the values of citizenship is not slogans but it is the manner and the values to be applied. It is like all other values can't be learnt entirely of books, courses and lectures theory but will depend primarily on practice and application on level of school, home, street, places of worship, and places of recreation, and institutions , party, and mass communication tools.

Thus, the education on the values in general, and the values of citizenship, in particular, and the attempt to build these values, cannot be achieved only through the lessons of public affairs. must All the knowledge of school must be subject to the values and contained them. and include the values in all school activities, as it is includes in all other daily activities and in all the educational system as a whole in order to achieve desired goal, and this is what demanded by(Mhedar,2005,p 56) said: The consolidation of the values of citizenship, and the establishment of democratic values and human rights in the scholastic environment should not be circumstantially occasionally doomed especially, as is prevalent today in most schools, but it must be permanently and truthfully reflect the openness of the school and its relation to social change. The instilling and building of the values in the youth are represented emerging through diffusion in school life, and educational relationship among teachers and pupils of different and social strata and affiliations. The education on the values of citizenship starts from involving everyone and their contribution in building freely educational relations .The renewal of it and consolidating it with dialogue and free and spontaneous and serious discussion in order to ensure harmony and And then we .appreciation of the exchange within the small community. can say that citizenship has two practiced areas : the first field of a nearby practiced by children and young people through their membership in the family, classroom, school, club, mates, and houses of worship. They are citizens and have rights and duties and tasks related to those groups and their operations, Therefore ,such files are essential and strong pillar for the second field of citizenship, a remote domain that includes official and governmental institutions, and the global system, and prepare the young people to participate in it when requested to do so (Aakuwari, 1995, p 3).

This requires a legitimate ,societal, clear and carefully planned project that identify the challenges that wants to overcome them, and aims to prepare the generations and methods of appropriate upbringing to ensure the targets, the project in turn depends on the institution of school that instills different types of knowledge and the nature of values and principles that are expected to be carried by the young people ,shown in a gradual order taking into account emerging growth levels and the nature of the life of the school and available ,cultural and political appropriate teaching aids and other conditions.

The status of citizenship does not exist, of course intuitively, does not occur haphazardly, does not grant from an external source, but gaining practice like the values of the other life, and whenever there is interest in their education , building and practicing at all levels Whenever there is cohesive society and accept each other, and each individual bears his/her responsibility , and know their rights and duties.

"The values do not take deep rooted unless it is embodied in the institutions in real society, there are laws which must be obeyed and penalties on outlaws, and there are political and professional, cultural, social, religious, charitable institutions contributing to them is the only way to process the effectiveness of the management of the individual in shaping social policy which leads to growth in the human personality in this complex fabric of social organizations in a way that makes patterns of customs and value systems that are a contributing factor to the individual to live successfully in its own society "(Phoenlx, 1982, pp. 341 ,342).

And the values of citizenship are not abstract mental issues, unless accompanied by learning sound practices to become talking about it incomplete or irrelevant (Alsbeeh, 2005, p 68,69)So, just to teach values does not entail building or emerging in the hearts of their moral behavior, just because the collection of values has no effective unless it turns into the behavior and work, sound practice (Negadat, 1999, p 20).

Education on the values of citizenship:

The education is the right center and most important upon which values feed and grow, whether education by family education, or school, or peer group, or the rest of the other educational institutions, They are (institutions) obliged to education to speak of an individual which instilling values of citizenship in it .

The separation of the values of citizenship from education is the separation of the soul from the body, thus creating generations who do not have any affiliation and loyalty to their identity and culture due to their interruption of her past, which in turn is reflected on the present and future.

Perhaps the main entrance to the development of the values of citizenship is the responsibility which emphasizes education in giving youth culture of citizenship and dealing with the structural synthesis and composition of the rights and duties including defines the responsibilities of individuals in their (Makroum, 2004, p 332).

Conclusion:

And the honesty burden on all employees in educational institutions, is solemn and serious at the same time. On their hands future conscious generations could choke and realize their obligations, ,their rights do not overdo it, has affiliation and loyalty to their religion and homeland, and their contributions to the obvious and participation in the service and nation-building, and when you get the contrary, the future will be in the wind, the absence of values that work on cohesion, and regulate relations, and comes on top of these values, the values of citizenship, but this is bound to prevail in the family practice of freedom, equality, dialogue, and must that there is a climate of freedom and dialogue within the school, and must adopt teacher development of critical thinking. I must get excited students to the concept of the nation in a tizzy teachers, and must be the reality of power and eliminate motivation for a sense of justice, freedom and equality, and all the social institutions that you configure and develop the spirit of resistance to the occupier the settler, and payment of imperial domination prevailing in all the land, and only had to talk about the values of citizenship interview irrelevant.
